Q: What's wrong with this SimpleJoda/JodaTime library? I have a code of this line: public class Scheduler { private static JodaTime jodaTime = new JodaTime(); static { jodaTime.setTimeZone(TimeZone.getTimeZone("GMT")); } public static Scheduler create(String fileName) { return new Scheduler(jodaTime); } public Scheduler(JodaTime joda) { this.joda = joda; } public void startExecution(String filename) { String date = joda.parseDateTime(filename).toString(); System.out.println("date: " + date); } The class I want to make this Scheduler class has a method static void startExecution(String filename), and its execution fails when I call joda.parseDateTime. It says that the argument passed to Joda time is incorrect. The startExecution method in the Scheduler class is called after the constructor in the Scheduler class completes. Does anyone know how I can fix this? I'm using joda-time v2.1. A: Joda-Time's parseDateTime will parse the String directly into DateTime, so DateTime object is returned, and DateTime object isn't what you want to pass to
